

THE MELBIRDIAN

MELBOCA (BOCA's Melbourne Branch) NEWSLETTER NO. 57
October 2007

MELBOCA Branch Meetings

Meetings are held at the Evergreen Centre, 45 Talbot Avenue, Balwyn, not far from the Balwyn Library, Melway 46 E8, on the fourth Tuesday of each month (with the exception of December) commencing at 8.00 pm. Entry is by a donation of $4.00.

Out-of-town members & visitors very welcome.

Future Speakers

Tuesday 23 October 2007 8.00pm.

Dr Raoul Mulder, "Love-life of Black Swans".

Raoul is senior lecturer in the Department of Zoology at Melbourne University. He has spent much time in both Madagascar and Botswana. His primary research interest is in the evolution of social behaviour and unusual mating systems, and he will share with us his fascinating research on the love-life of Black Swans. Symbols of everlasting love? Maybe not!

Tuesday 27 November 2007 8.00 pm.

Patrick-Jean Guay, "Ecology, mating behaviour and conservation in Musk Ducks".

Patrick hails from Canada and is currently engaged in his PhD at Melbourne University. He has been researching the Musk Duck for a number of years (some years were very dry) and looks forward to sharing his research and experiences with us.

Breakfast with the Birds at Banyule

Sunday 28 October 2007, starting at 7.30am.

This is the first day of Daylight Saving.

MELBOCA has organised the bird walk section of this Banyule City Council activity for several years.

It will be held at Banyule Flats Reserve via Somerset Drive. MELBOCA provides the bird leaders and leads the walks at 7.30am; the Council provides breakfast, commencing at 9.00 am, followed by birdcall.

There is no cost for the activity but all participants must register (for insurance and catering purposes) by phoning BOCA National Office on 9877 5342. Please encourage non-birders to give it a go with you.

Weekdays Outings Notes

16 July 2007. Koonung Creek and Maranoa Gardens.

The weather was cool, clear and breezy when we started walking along the Koonung Creek Linear Park at Mont Albert. There were 27 pairs of eyes and much interest in what this reserve would contain. Musk Lorikeets were foraging in the eucalypt blossom by the carpark but the other species included those universals—Noisy Miner and Australian Magpie. From an overhead boardwalk, which led high across the noisy Eastern Freeway, we surveyed a wetland beside the creek. Here were Pacific Black Duck, Chestnut Teal and a pair of Hardheads, as well as Purple Swamphen, Dusky Moorhen and one Eurasian Coot looking rather lonely.

Silvereyes flew among the tree tops near us. Descending to water level, we had good views of an Australasian Grebe moving rapidly near the reeds. The walk took us near a short track through a fenced area undergoing revegetation, so we investigated. A pair of Grey Currawongs foraged on the ground until our approach became too close, and a Grey Butcherbird was spotted moving between trees. Then the sighting of two Tawny Frogmouths in a eucalypt was the highpoint of the walk so far. They were the first our group had sighted for the year and were obligingly perched where good views could be obtained with a little careful footwork.

Returning to the main track, we walked to the open area near the meeting of the track and the freeway, then the siren song of "lunch" started to be heard and we turned in our tracks. The birds hadn't knocked off however—a raptor was sighted high in a eucalypt and discussion followed. It was an Australian Hobby and the local Magpie-lark was diving at it. This reversed the earlier situation where a female Magpie-lark had been harassed by a couple of Noisy Miners. The morning did not finish there as a Collared Sparrowhawk was sighted beside the creek. We sat for lunch feeling rather pleased, there had been a total of 36 species sighted by this stage.

Some needed to depart after lunch but the remainder drove around to Maranoa Gardens in Balwyn. Here the attraction was native plants as well as birds and many of us spent a lot of time reading labels and considering the potential of different plants for bird habitat and decoration. No new species were added to the list here and the lack of understorey meant that small birds were limited to Brown Thornbills.

Despite the list of only twelve species, the afternoon was enjoyable and we considered that the creek reserve plus the native garden made a good outing.

7 August 2007. Birds Land Reserve, Belgrave Heights.

When we'd all congregated on a mild, clear and breezy morning, there were twenty of us. The reserve was clearly popular with the locals and many walkers and dog-walkers shared the carpark with our group. Several new members and a couple of visitors, one from the USA, swelled our numbers. Setting off behind our leader, Ken Baker, we were interested in the antics of a Magpie-lark which fluttered vertically near a stock watering point across the fence of the reserve. Then two Australian King-Parrots were in clear view perched low beside the track. We considered that they would be voted the "bird of the day", when the advice came back from the vanguard of the group, that there was a Powerful Owl up ahead and to approach quietly. Delight! A male Powerful Owl was perched high under the canopy in his daytime roost while holding the body of a headless Common Ringtail Possum. For many it was the first view of this fascinating bird species and for others it was the first sighting of the iconic pose with its prey. Great smiles all round and thanks to the first observer.

We continued, adding Darter to the waterbirds, Australian Wood and Pacific Black Ducks, Australasian Grebe, Purple Swamphen, Eurasian Coot and Dusky Moorhen by the pond, and then followed the steep track to the ridge line. Not many birds were seen as we ascended, then the calmer side of the hill yielded raptors—a Nankeen Kestrel and then a Wedge-tailed Eagle being harassed by a pair of Peregrine Falcons. The track descended and we watched with mixed feelings as a Grey Butcherbird dived from a branch, caught a small lizard and then ate it, dropping pieces as the lizard was cut up.

After returning to the cars for lunch we had a bird call of 47 species and then a small number of us checked out the roadside area afterwards. This walk added Tawny Frogmouth and Crested Shrike-tit to the list, bringing the total to 49 species for the day and many thanks were given to Ken for introducing so many of us to this interesting area not very far from the Melbourne CBD.

Community Monitoring of Bird Utilisation of Constructed Wetlands

The above project, instigated by Melbourne Water, involves the monthly monitoring of ten constructed urban wetlands in the Dandenong Catchment.

Bird Observation & Conservation Australia (BOCA) was awarded the contract for this project which extends over a period of three years. The Melbourne Branch of BOCA (MELBOCA), is monitoring five of the ten wetlands, the other five are being monitored by Penboc, three, and Bayboca, two. The project commenced in June 2007.

The five wetlands being monitored by MELBOCA are:
Frog Hollow Wetlands, Endeavour Hills
Kilberry Boulevard, Hampton Park East Drain
River Gum Wetlands, Hampton Park East Drain
South Golf Links Road, Narre Warren
Narre Warren Township Drain

(Note: Access still being arranged for Narre Warren Township Drain.)

The progressive results from June to August 2007 are contained in the table (enclosed separately). As of August 2007, a combined total of 63 species has been recorded for the four wetlands. Continuing results will be published in The Melbirdian.
